

June 14, 2005

Judy "Friggin" Guest observing Pancho who is clearly in a Champagne induced stupor.

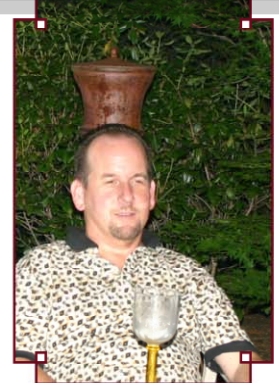

Although this was the first meeting in almost six months the membership retained its insanity. Much to her discredit, Judy "Friggin" Guest did not seem to be offended by the antics.

We were all quite concerned when Calamity's head spontaneously caught fire. Pancho avoided the problem by attaching a chimney to his head.

The place cards were designed in honor of Calamity "Friggin" Jane's upcoming move to Colorado.

In a match of previous champions the challenger from V. Sattui Cellars defeated the venerable Veuve Clicquot Ponsardin. Hia and Calamity picked the winner with Boon registering the dissenting vote. Pancho and Judy did not vote although Judy wisely agreed with Boon's choice.

In an effort to further confuse the panel Calamity introduced an unofficial contender - the previously undefeated Perrier Jouet. It was generally agreed that it still tasted pretty good but smelled awful.

Calamity and Hia observing the ceremonial hoof.

Tasters at work.

The usual chocolate laden dessert.

No Comment