Traditional Champagne takes another hit

Once again a “real” Champagne, Nicolas Feuillatte (the ever popular “fellatio”) has been defeated by an upstart, this time from California. The winner of the tasting was from Roederer Estate, owned by the venerable French Champagne house, but American none the less.

The contenders

Cinco de Mayo, a little late

Although the meeting was held on May 13th Cattle, our hostess, continued in the spirit of the Cinco de Mayo tradition. It was especially fitting this year since Cinco de Mayo, 2008 was the last meeting attended by Calamity F. Jane. The group carried on in memory of her spirit.

New Business

Family Rates?

Kit and Poncho have proudly announced an upcoming addition to their family. As a result the club members are now faced with a policy decision about whether or not dependents get a waiver of the $10,000 initiation fee. It is unlikely that the new “cub” will need to come up with the money since no one else has.

In-depth policy discussion

In addition to the monetary / membership issues investigation is going on to determine availability of cub-sized clothing products with the proper logo, identification of appropriate “vintage” baby formulas and new, more appropriate, terminology (is this the end of fellatio?)

Brain Strain

A trend is emerging at club meetings. It involves the use of clever puzzles to entertain the club members as they gradually fade into a fog of alcohol. However, it should be noted that Boon is always in a fog and it is not clear that he can endure the mental stress resulting from this sinister form of entertainment.

Clueless

Chow Time

Although club meetings are “not about the food” the group is not shy about attacking the now traditional pizza / chocolate menu. Perhaps there is an opportunity to broaden the horizon and begin blind tastings of pizza and chocolate desserts. During these tastings the members could cleanse their palates with vodka or some other appropriate spirit.
